I want to wash my car and the car wash is only 200 feet away. Should I start my car and drive there or just walk.

Just walk. At 200 feet, by the time you start the car, buckle up, back out, and park again, you'd spend more time driving than walking. Plus you save gas and it's barely a one-minute stroll.

The image features a teal-colored logo consisting of the word "GO" in a bold, sans-serif font. To the left of the "G", there are three horizontal teal lines of increasing length, creating a sense of motion or speed. The entire logo is centered horizontally on a white background.

GO

The winners of this shift to agentic engineering are the languages that have solved the build system, runtime performance, packaging, and distribution problems. Increasingly that looks like Go and Rust:

Create a go function
that concatenates
two string slices

Can You Spot the Bug?

func ConcatSlices(a, b []string) []string { return append(a, b...)
